

Some Bolshevist Poetry

HOW THE SOVIETS KEEP UP THE SPIRIT OF MURDER

The defenders of the Lening regime insist that the rule of the proletariat in Russia is a protective arm and letters that the poets liberated from "capitalist" tyranny, can under the ideal regime of communism, produce immortal works.

Now, the rare visitors to the Bolshevist paradise bring evidence that makes us accept those statements with extreme reserve. The fact is that there is no liberty of the press in Russia; that only the poets recognized by the government, have the right to publish their works and that the so-called political liberty has in reality ended in a system of letters licensed by the government.

In justice to Russian letters it must, however, be said that all talented Russian authors have abstained from writing, or at any rate, from publishing their works during the rule of the proletariat, so that only the official poets, the literary slaves of the government, have their say.

With the exception of a few second-rate writers, present-day Russia counts five poets recognized as such by the government. They are the citizens Elisek, Byelvi (Wells), Ivanoff, Tolstoy and Mayakovsky. All five are futurists, and their verses are freed from all prosaic and even grammatical restraint.

Rightly or wrongly, Mayakovsky is considered the most gifted poet of this new Red paradise. The case of Prague has recently published a few samples of his work, which may be interesting to quote.

The official bolshevist propaganda has always tried to give assurance of its respect for the past works of art. This claim is false. Let us see what Mayakovsky writes on this subject in his Revolutionary Odes:

The world's conflagration has softened our nerves.
How "firemen" burn.
Murder is burning.
With petroleum and water.
Cornelian as well as a certain Racine.
And we throw them into the street
To illuminate our rubbish.

Again:
If you meet a White Guard,
Shoot him.
And don't forget Rakhael.
And don't forget Rakhael.
Why not attack Pouchkine
And the other classics?

If the poet shows himself little indulgent toward the artists of the past, he has no more clemency for the philosophers. The following advice he gives the German philosopher:

Germany—
Into its open jaws
Throw the thoughts,
The musings,
The books.
Show your teeth with insolence.
Young men,
The knife between your teeth.
Unsheath your swords!
Russia!
Has the rapacious fervor grown cold?
The desires are violent like the sav-
Drac by their meager legs

WITH WOMEN OF TODAY

The highest scientific honor ever received by an American woman of science from a foreign university has been conferred upon Miss Annie G. Cannon, of the Harvard college observatory. The famous old University of Groningen in Holland has awarded to Miss Cannon the honorary degree of doctor of sciences in recognition of her important work in astronomy.

Miss Cannon has long been recognized as one of the leading American astronomers. Her new honor indicates that she is regarded abroad as one of the leading women scientists of the world. It is believed that no American woman has heretofore received an honorary doctorate from a foreign university.

The great work of Miss Cannon which brings to the Harvard observatory and to Harvard University this distinguished foreign honor is the collaborative work with the late Prof. E. C. Pickering in the preparation and publication of nine massive volumes of a catalogue of stellar spectra. The work is recognized by astronomers as one of the cornerstones of their science, a work indispensable in the statistical study of the structure of the sidereal universe.

Miss Cannon, a native of the state of Delaware, is a graduate of Wellesley college. She joined the staff of the Harvard college observatory in 1897, and in 1914 was made curator of astronomical photographs at Harvard. She was made an honorary member of the Royal Astronomical society of England a few years ago, and is the only woman now living who has the coveted title of doctor of sciences. In 1907 she received the honorary degree of master of arts from Wellesley college, and in 1918 the honorary degree of doctor of science from Delaware college.

For years she was the treasurer of the American Astronomical society, and is now an honorary member and one of the councillors of the American Association of variable Star Observers.

Miss Kate Wagon of Bartlesville, Okla., has been elected American girl secretary of a chamber of commerce. Miss Wagon, whose real name is Quinlan, Indian for little girl, is a full-blooded, 100 per cent Indian. Her father, Joe Wagon, was a Delaware Indian who emigrated with his tribe from Texas into Kansas, then to Oklahoma, where he met and married Anna Daniels, an educated Cherokee Indian maid.

Miss Wagon herself is a well educated, soft spoken, sweet-faced little girl of 22. She tells in a most delightful and naive manner how her father could neither read nor write nor could he speak English. Her grandfather, who is still living, speaks nothing but his native language. Her mother, however, taught school. Miss Wagon attended both high school and business college and took a position in a bank. Later she was given a position with the Bartlesville chamber of commerce and has since been promoted until she is now assistant secretary of that body, a position which is unusual for a woman, and doubly so for a full-blooded Indian miss.

It was her ambition to go through college, but she had to give up her dream and instead is sending younger sisters through school. Like other Indians, Miss Wagon has her allotment of 320 acres and she has purchased 170 in addition, giving her a good sized farm of her own. She made her first trip east of the Mississippi river when Bartlesville business women sent her as one of their delegates to represent them at the convention of the national federation of business and professional women's clubs recently held in Cleveland, O.

Beautiful Hostess for K. C. Convention

Miss Loretta Wilson.

Miss Loretta Wilson of California will head the group of beautiful hostesses who will have charge of the entertainment of the 20,000 Knights of Columbus and their "women folk" at their international convention in San Francisco Aug. 2-3-4. The K. of C. plan to appropriate $5,000,000 for education and hospital work for ex-service men.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Leigh W. Johnson.

Mrs. Leigh W. Johnson, 25, formerly Miss Marie Warner, a resident of Janesville for 14 years, died at Mercer hospital at 2 a. m. Monday, less than 10 months after her marriage.

She is survived by her husband, former employee of the Janesville tractor company, a baby girl, Kathleen Ann, born July 21 and her father, Samuel Warner, Janesville. Born in Edinburgh, Ind., Aug. 11, 1885, she came to Janesville in 1907 and attended the Jefferson and high schools here. She was married last year to Leigh W. Johnson, formerly of Gratiot and they made their home at 29 South Main street.

The body has been removed to Ryan's undertaking rooms, where it may be seen by friends between 5 and 7 p. m. Monday. It will be shipped to Gratiot at 7:30 p. m. Monday and funeral services will be held at the Methodist church there at 1 p. m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Gratiot cemetery.

Mrs. Louise Kuhlman. Funeral of Mrs. Louise Kuhlman was held Saturday afternoon from the home, 417 South Jackson street, and at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, Rev. E. A. J. Tieu officiating. Services were held in both English and German. Pallbearers were George W. Yahn, St. John Kierberg, Fred Farnsworth, L. J. Briggs, William Yahn, and August Yahn. Interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

Charles Robert Robinson. Charles Robert Robinson, 411 West Milwaukee street, died at 12:30 Sunday at the age of 55. He is survived by his wife and a brother, Harry, of McKaysport, Pa., where he was born. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday at St. Mary's church.

AUTO HITS PONY; YOUTH IS INJURED

James Scobie, employed at the D. J. Luby Co. store, was injured about the chest and was cut in the right hand, when his car ran into a pony on the Janesville-Delaware road Sunday afternoon. Scobie said he was traveling about 15 miles an hour on the lower road when a pony 20 feet ahead suddenly jumped off the high road directly into the path of the car. The driver, of the pony, Young Hughes, escaped injuries. Scobie's two brothers were with him at the time.

ANOTHER SMASHUP ON CONCRETE ROAD

partly on the concrete and part on the dirt shoulder off the road, the Ford driver could not negotiate the road safely in passing.

The Ford was being driven by Arthur Sullivan, seed salesman, from Minneapolis, who had been stopping in Beloit.

Sullivan just managed to miss the Malinowski car head-on and smashed into the fenders, ripping them off and taking both wheels off his own machine. The Ford went skidding down the road for 100 feet and then off the road into the ditch.

Sullivan was arrested and taken to Beloit. He was arraigned on two charges,—that of driving an automobile while intoxicated and speeding. Upon conviction he was fined $125.

On the return to the scene of the wreck Tatrokman M. Shultz, of the Beloit department, hid in bushes near the "Inman" station to watch the damaged Ford car.

Four Janesville youths returning from a Beloit amusement park, Erving Warren, 20, Arthur Williams, 20, Orville Carey, 19 and Lawrence Bell, 20, are alleged to have attempted to steal parts of the machine. The patrolman interrupted them in the act of removing the tires. It is claimed, "The three youths who were going over the Ford are alleged to have jumped into the machine, driven by Balsey, and to have speeded down the road."

The patrolman gave chase in his motorcycle and caught them, but not before the youths had thrown away the headlights, tools and other equipment, alleged to have been taken. Balsey and Carey furnished the $100 bail demanded by the court. The other two are in the Rock county jail awaiting a hearing on August 4. Balsey put up his Ford car as security for his appearance.

Arrested Saturday night 45 minutes after he had joined the Seagrist & Gibson car wash, here as a ticket seller, V. E. Howay was arraigned in municipal court Monday on a charge involving relations with some boys under 16. His examination was set for August 4 and his bail at $4,000.

How Can You Sell Big Loaves of Such Wonderful Bread at the Price?

That's a question that is very often asked us. And our answer is this: It's because every penny goes for quality—there is NO WASTE of time, material or effort at the HOLSUM Bakery. We buy our materials in very large quantities—we run our bakery on the basis of scientific management. Automatic machines do most of the work. One man supervising these machines can attend to a thousand loaves of bread in the time that it would take you to tend to three or four.

But even with all of these savings we could not give you in a small loaf the wonderful goodness of the big HOLSUM Loaf. Big loaves from the same dough are better grained, better baked, better flavored.

But with all of our facilities put behind a big loaf we are able to give you in the big HOLSUM loaf the finest bread your household has ever enjoyed.

TASTY RECIPES
Pickle Relish—Pass through the meat grinder enough crisp cabbage to make one pint and add two mild green peppers and four stalks of celery ground like the cabbage. Mix thoroughly one teaspoonful of celery seed, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard seed, half a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a cupful of brown sugar and one-quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Let the mixture stand for one hour, stirring occasionally, then blend with the ground vegetables. This relish should not be eaten until it has stood for 24 hours, and it kept in a cool place it will keep for several days.

Banana Boat Salad—Allow small banana for each serving. Peel and with a vegetable cutter remove the center, giving the outline of a boat. Fill with equal quantities of diced canned pineapple and chopped celery dressed with mayonnaise and garnish with balls of banana pulp that have been rolled in chopped toasted nuts. Set the "boats" on crisp lettuce leaves and serve very cold.

Delleious Fillings for Picnic

Grated Gruyere cheese, chopped English walnuts.
Sliced tomatoes, mayonnaise and horseradish.
Watercress, crisp bacon and green ham bread.
Watercress, chopped fine, with oil mayonnaise.
Chopped ham and sweet relish.
Green onions, ripe olives, hard-boiled eggs, chili sauce, celery and mayonnaise.
Neufchatel cheese, fresh dews Worcester sauce, stuffed olives, pimento, chopped pecans, mayonnaise. Nuts with lemon juice.

SUGGESTIONS

If you do not happen to have aluminum polish, use borax to clean your aluminum dishes. Dampen a cloth in water and put a little borax on it. After rubbing the article well, wash in warm water and wipe with dry cloth.

Housekeepers who have trouble in running a rod through the hem of such curtains just put a little finger from an old kid glove, slip it over the end of the rod, and it will work like magic.

A very satisfactory clothes sprayer may be made by punching holes in the top of a vaseline bottle. Any bottle having a metal top will do, but those with screw tops are best, as they do not come off easily.

A little wood at the end of a soft cloth will remove from tables white spots caused by hot dishes or water marks. Rub the spot quickly to prevent taking off the varnish.

CLEANING HINTS

Gasoline—For cleaning enameled tubs, bowls and sinks.

Turpentine—For dusting wax floors.

Washing soda—For cleaning drain.

CHICAGO-MILWAUKEE PASSENGER AIRPLANE SERVICE IS ASSURED

Chicago.—Daily airplane passenger service between Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and other cities on Lake Michigan, will be started in a few weeks, it was announced Monday. The Triangle Airways, Inc., is preparing to launch the venture. Flying time to Milwaukee will be about 65 minutes, it was announced, and stops will be made at Racine and Kenosha. Trips to Detroit will take about four hours, it was said.

NORTHCLIFFE FEUD STIRS WASHINGTON

English Politics Also May Face Upheaval Following Criticism.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.
Washington—Lord Northcliffe has come and gone, and all Washington has settled back to discuss the most unusual feud it has ever encountered, still wondering how narrow the Atlantic ocean can be at times of his criticisms of a newspaper publisher in a foreign country can touch official life in another capital and give it an uneasy 24 hours.

If Lord Northcliffe had not been so free with his pen in writing about Prime Minister Lloyd George and Lord Curzon, British foreign secretary, official Washington would have made a great special event of his visit. As it was, officials who had planned openly to show their friendship for a distinguished foreign publisher took their cue from the action of the British embassy, which made a last minute cancellation of a dinner that was to be given in honor of his lordship.

Visit With Harding
Lord Northcliffe did spend an hour and 20 minutes at the white house with President Harding, and also called on Secretary Hughes at the state department, but the visits were at the executive offices and at the state department building. Both were informal visits, such as might occur if any prominent American publisher paid his respects. There was every evidence of cordiality. Socially, however, the government took no part in any entertainment, as might otherwise have been the case. Relations between governments are too often strained by mistakes of courtesy. The visit of Lord Northcliffe to Washington was no exception. One of the chief reasons why Viscount Edward Grey was not received by President Wilson during his special visit to the United States was the fact that Viscount Grey himself was a political opponent of Mr. Wilson in the senate.

Northcliffe Had Good Time.
Notwithstanding the obvious delicacies of the situation, Lord Northcliffe had a very good time, and official Washington relished his visit, especially because of the unusual atmosphere it created. The newspaper men of Washington, feeling no such restraints as affect the government in such a situation, gave his lordship perhaps the most distinctive entertainment that any foreigner ever received in the capital. This may have been inspired by a professional admiration for a man who ousted one ministry and transformed the entire conduct of the war by Great Britain, or it may have been the result of the splendid impression which Lord Northcliffe had made among those who knew that he represented the world's most powerful newspaper.

Scarcely a day passed in which scores of newspapers which he owns and controls. Anyway, it seemed fitting that this visitor, whose sincerity as a friend of the United States has never been doubted, should be given some token of the widespread appreciation in which he is held here. It so happened that the only ones in Washington who were able to manifest openly their regard for Northcliffe were the newspaper men.

Criticism of George

Although Washington is not familiar with the niceties of English politics, the impression given by the

RUSSIANS FACE FAMINE AND PESTILENCE

Where famine and plague threaten Russia. Shaded area denotes district where failure of crops has brought people near starvation.

1—Twenty million Russians face famine and pestilence. Crops have failed generally in the governments of Astrakhan, Saratov, Samara, Simbirsk, Ufa and Viatka. These regions are shown on the map in shade. They correspond in general with the Volga valley. No rain has fallen there for a long time. Weils and streams are drying up. Great numbers of refugees from these regions are reported.

2—Elyan thousand cases of cholera were reported in June, mostly in the governments of Astrakhan, Saratov and Samara. The disease is said to be spreading, due to the almost total lack of medicine.

3—A plague of locusts is said to be eating everything in the Kuban region, shown on the map by dots. The government has mobilized part of the army to fight the insects.

Northcliffe party is that the recent outbreak of hostility on the part of the British government grew out of a delegation to one of the Northcliffe papers that the British delegation to the forthcoming disarmament conference at Washington should be composed of men who understood the American people. The Northcliffe editorials plainly disapproved of the idea that Lord Curzon, British foreign secretary, should be a member of the delegation, contending that he was of a British type not suited for such an important mission.

George and Wilson.
Similarly, the Northcliffe press has argued against the proposed departure of Prime Minister Lloyd George from England, and has used practically the same argument against his coming to America as were employed in the effort to dissuade President Wilson from going to Europe at the time of the peace conference. The Northcliffe idea seems to be that home affairs are in much too critical a condition to be handled by a leaderless cabinet. Lord Northcliffe himself thinks Viscount Bryce, former British ambassador to the United States and distinguished author of books on American life, and Lord Robert Cecil, who worked in such close harmony with the American delegation at Paris, would be better suited to present the viewpoint of the British people.

May Visit Ministry

The visit of Lord Northcliffe to Washington, coupled with his severe criticisms of British policy, may be the forerunners of important events in British politics later on, when the disarmament conference is in progress. Lord Northcliffe himself is going to the Far East and will be there while the diplomats are assembled in Washington. He has openly expressed himself against the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, but, nevertheless, is a good friend of the Japanese people. It would not be surprising if Lord Northcliffe played a prominent part through his newspapers in shaping British policy at the disarmament conference. Some observers think that with true Northcliffe skill the distinguished publisher has set the stage for a supreme effort to oust another British ministry.

But as the evening wore on and the demands of business pressed more heavily upon him, he forgot about the stranger. He would have been inordinately surprised to see Duke, usually so distrustful of newcomers, exclaiming a few volleys of remarks with Conrad Hayes; he would have been utterly amazed to know that a parody of a greeting marked the first interview for three years between old friends.

"Got through a k. I take it," said Duke, opening the conversation. The other nodded. He stood with his back to the door, and his hands in his pockets. "This afternoon's stars?"

Haynes jerked his head up and down again. "Followed your directions," he said. "No trouble. You weren't the only passenger," asked Duke, with an interest that argued something deeper than appeared in the simplicity of the question.

"Kopa. There's a cargo of curdles along, too," Hayes answered. "Under police escort all the way."

"Very interesting," said Duke. "A couple of hundred dollars, I hear. Rank's got a ton of it on hand to meet the demands of the miners when they turn in their dust after the clean-up."

"Finding that no one stood near, he lowered his voice slightly and asked:

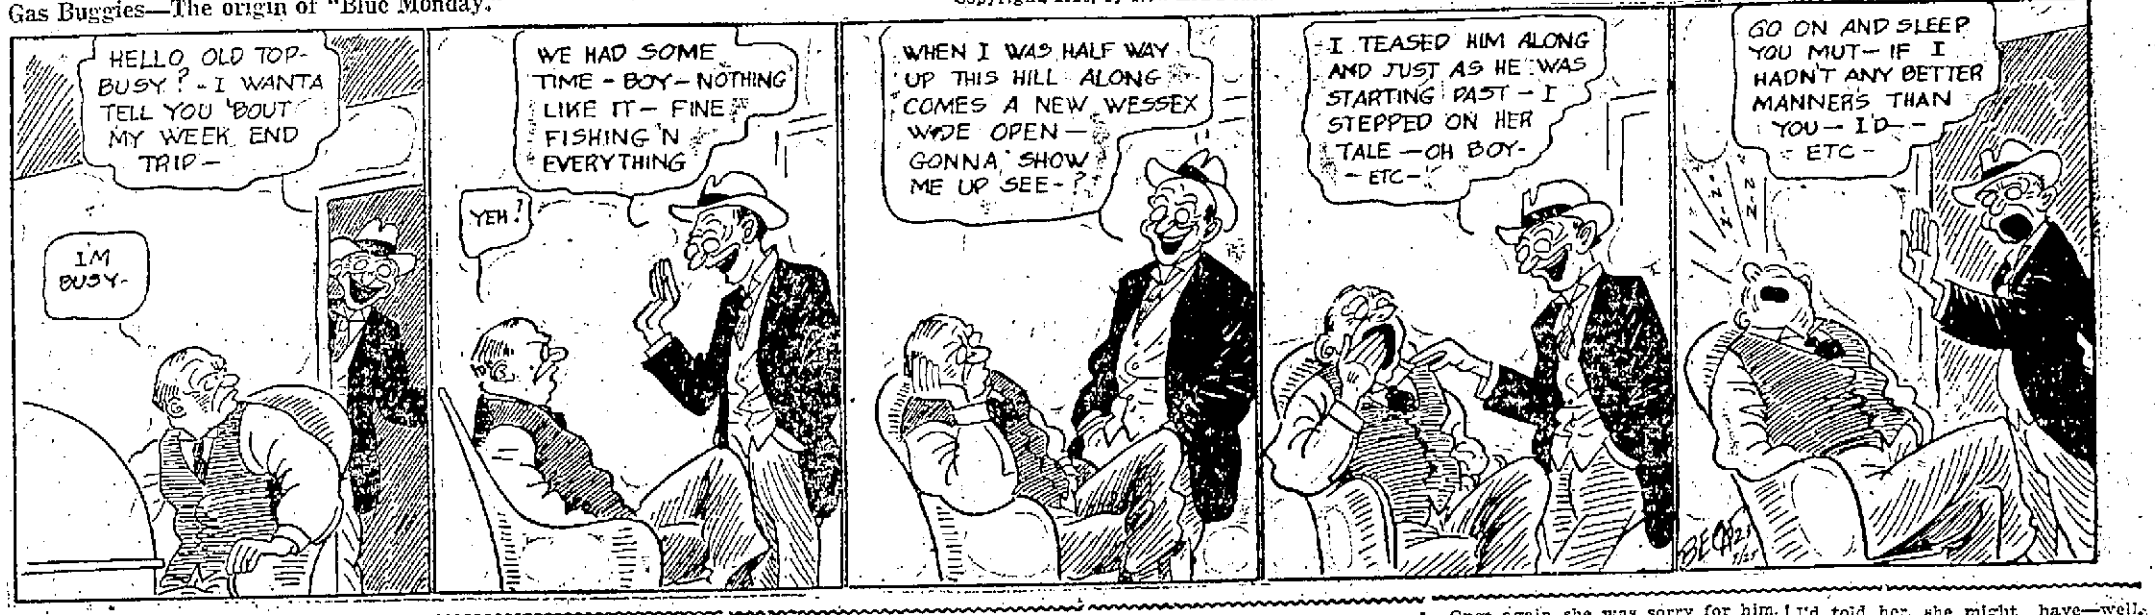

"Everything set?"

The man of few words nodded once.

Duke jerked his head backward. "See that door behind me—just beside the gallery stairs?"

Through there when you get a room at the end of the passage. Turn down the lights and flatten your hide behind the door. Till bring in the first, an he will follow. You know the drill. Get me?"

Haynes melted into the crowd and Duke set out to find Goldie. As he had expected, she was with Kloth, who was sitting at a table, catching her hands and pulling her to her feet. A name of white-hot fury leaped into Kloth's eyes. But Duke enjoyed Meadows' confidence. He had seen Goldie's face when she had been in his hands, and he knew that she was not the same. He had seen her when she was in his hands, and he knew that she was not the same. He had seen her when she was in his hands, and he knew that she was not the same.

The Subtle Persnality of Food

When he sat down for his first meal at the little boarding house, John Russell, ex-convict, who had not yet found his way into the world, had a feeling of being a stranger. He was not used to the soft, white walls, the clean, polished floors, the comfortable furniture. He was not used to the soft, white walls, the clean, polished floors, the comfortable furniture. ## BILLY WHISKER

by FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

When Mr. West, Violet and Mummy were inspecting the fat stock and Mrs. West and her friend were sampling preserves and pickles in the main building, which was decorated with wheat, corn, pumpkins and squash, hung in artistic designs from the rafters, Billy and Nannie were driven in the ground by little dark boy (Mummy's nephew) in a fancy Turkish costume to match the gaily caparisoned ponies that had red pompoms sticking up between their ears to show off the red and black patent leather harness which they wore.
